On Saturday, August 17, 2002, SUNDARI, Los Angeles Skin Care and Nordstrom at the Grove combined forces to produce a beauty event focused on educating the skin care consumer.

Shoppers were treated to complimentary facials and given specific advice on how to treat their skin and uncover their inner beauty. Approximately 200 people passed through the area as Gabriela Meise and Christine Dillon attended to the needs of all. Also on hand was Michael Howard, international lecturer and skin care expert.

“The luxurious and effective products by SUNDARI can satisfy the most scrupulous consumer, while at the same time address the most difficult of skin care concerns,” explained Howard. “It is only natural that we have teamed with the SUNDARI and Nordstrom. We all desire to offer the highest level of service and exceed the expectations of the consumer.”

Founded on the principles of the ancient science Ayurveda, SUNDARI skin care is based on a unique blend of herbs and essential oils. The result is a line of extraordinary products that help people discover truly healthy skin and their own sense of well being.

Los Angeles Skin Care is a cooperative enterprise by Dr. Andrew Berman and Michael Howard with flagship operations in Beverly Hills. In addition to meeting the daily needs of skin care clients, the “dynamic duo” can be seen around the world lecturing and educating those interested in looking and feeling better.
